

JASMINE. Sure. No one does. I'm Jasmine.

KIM. When will they turn up the heat?

JASMINE. That's funny, that's a good one. There is no heat.

KIM. But it's cold here.

JASMINE. Get used to it.

KIM. There has to be a dome system, we can climatize, at least stop the wind.

JASMINE. How you going to stop the wind?

KIM. With a climate system!

JASMINE. We're outside, stupid. There is no climate system.

KIM. We're in a dome.

JASMINE. There is no dome. Didn't you look out the shuttle?

KIM. There were no windows. We are not. Outside.

JASMINE. Smell the air. What is it?

KIM. It's a natural emitter, wood, or vegetation, it's very good, very authentic. Smells like something rotting.

JASMINE. It's called nature. Get used to it.

KIM. I don't believe you.

JASMINE. Okay. But when the bears come, just a little advice: they scratch for real. Here.

KIM. What is it?

JASMINE. Food. They don't give us much, you'd better eat.

KIM. It's all dirty.

JASMINE. That's cause it grew in dirt, stupid.

KIM. It what?

JASMINE. Okay. I'll back up. This is a carrot. It grows in dirt. I am giving you a carrot. You can eat the carrot. You will enjoy eating the carrot. If you don't eat the carrot, you may starve.
